In-game scenarios are made more dynamic and feel more realistic with attributes displayed on every player and ball. The ball exhibits more responsiveness and increased control, and players are no longer stationary when taking on opponents. Players also now feel more powerful and explosive, as they explode off the ground faster and harder after receiving the ball. Specific features will be announced at a later date. Commenting on the video, Executive Producer for FIFA, Alex Olney, said: “FIFA has always been at the forefront of delivering authentic football, and this season we have pushed the envelope even further in achieving the ultimate goal - to make football feel even more realistic than ever before. The introduction of ‘HyperMotion’ technology brings in a new level of simulation and realism to gameplay.” FIFA 20 introduced brand new gameplay elements and features in the form of passing, tackling and shooting, and evolved realism on both pitch and in-game. The brand new Ball Physics and Player Attributes were a massive focus of this year’s game, and they were the most requested additions. In this year’s instalment, the Player Attributes have been implemented further into the game, including Player Traits which bring gamers closer to the real-world, player traits that were released earlier this year, and have made an ever-bigger impact on the game. The brand new Player Traits have now been added to all more than 90 real-life global players – meaning they will be in the game in an authentic way, making players even more lifelike. It will be interesting to see how players evolve with these attributes over time. Commenting on the challenges in adding Player Traits to real-life players, Jordan Rossier, Executive Producer for Player Traits, said: “It was a daunting task to simulate and implement a number of real-life player traits, but every time we tried something it felt so real to the game. We’ve had some great feedback and now we’re all looking forward to seeing what players make of their players!” Other features of FIFA 20 include: Gameplay In-Depth Training – Improve your skills through in-depth training with the brand new Training functionalities. Use Training to efficiently develop yourself or hire a Training Partner to provide personalized coaching.
